Drusen

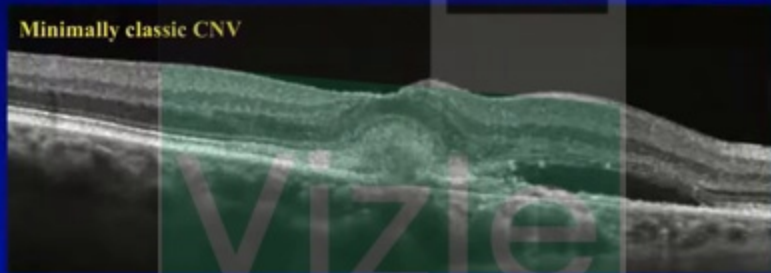

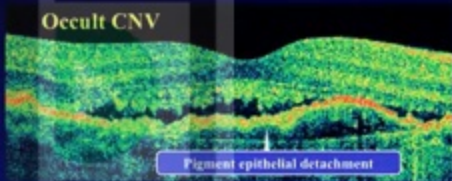

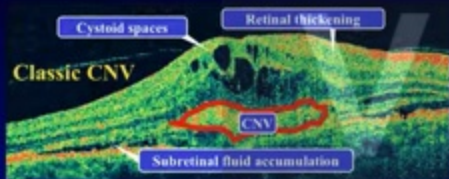

Classification of drusen¹:

1. Hard (nodular) drusen –small, little risk of progression to late AMD
2. Soft (exudative) drusen –larger, ill-defined, higher risk of progression to Late AMD
3. Basal linear deposits (diffuse drusen), membranous material, seen in histology
4. Cuticular drusen (previously called basal laminar drusen) occur in middle age, and are associated with a relatively good prognosis.
5. Reticular pseudodrusen (reticular drusen, or subretinal drusenoid deposits) appear as uniform net-like structures of granular hyperreflective material. There is a significant relationship between these and late-stage AMD.
