Paraphrasing IV

Cottrell (2003) states that referencing should always be used when using the ideas and opinions of others in academic writing so that the original source can be easily located.

Cottrell (2003) states that in writing, it is important to state the sources of ideas. 'References' allow readers to find the sources themselves.

In academic writing, it is essential to state the sources of ideas and information. Such 'references' allow readers to refer back to the sources themselves' (Cottrell, 2003, p.135).

Conclusion

- Referencing correctly strengthens
your assignments.
